Latest issue of CHEX-Point looks at putting community-led health on the agenda

The Summer 2011 issue of our quarterly newsletter CHEX-Point is now available to download here. This issue looks at putting community-led health firmly on the agenda, highlighting some of the work of national community-led health networks who addressed delegates at the CHEX conference in February of this year.

Also in this issue we have an article on Dunfermline based project, Safe Space who have been providing support services to survivors of sexual abuse for the last 21 years. And we hear from much further afield with an article about community work in Norway.

We also bid farewell to Tom Warrington who has been Editor of CHEX-Point for six years, and we wish him very well for the future!

CHEX-Point is available in hard copy, if you would like to receive a copy please contact us directly olivia@scdc.org.uk

Sustainable energy for urban communities

Community Energy Scotland has started a new Urban Program and is looking for communities to work with in order to get the program underway. The scheme will provide support to help projects to succeed with regard to reducing energy consumption, cutting running costs, providing more comfortable community facilities, alleviating fuel poverty and providing a sustainable income source for communities. The scheme will be running until March 2012 although the programme may continue depending on funding availability and need.

For more information visit www.communityenergyscotland.org.uk or email ruth.evans@communityenergyscotland.org.uk.

Self management for children in Lanarkshire

Stay Well Lanarkshire is Action for Sick Children (Scotland)'s generic self management programme for young people in Lanarkshire, aged 11-18, living with long term health conditions (such as diabetes, irritable bowel disease, asthma, arthritis, epilepsy and others). The project is run in partnership with NHS Lanarkshire and with funding from BBC Children in Need, The Robertson Trust and Lloyds TSB Foundation for Scotland.

Project Officer Amy Joss and Project Assistant Lysia Abercrombie invite young people to come to the workshops and explore issues of living life with a long term health condition in a fun and interactive way. Topics include realities of illness, coping with change, managing emotions and feelings and communicating with family, friends and healthcare staff. The active learning sessions include DVD-making, cooking and drumming.

The next workshop programme will begin on Saturday September 3, 2011 in Coatbridge. There are three full-day workshops (also on October 1 and November 5) in a programme and a young person would benefit most by attending all of these. Young people, parents/carers or interested professionals can find out more or make a referral to the project by contacting Amy Joss by text/phone 07935 305930 or by email amy.joss@nhs.net.

More information on the project is also available on the Action for Sick Children (Scotland) website: www.ascscotland.org.uk.

Home growing in Stirling

CHEX-Point Snippets is always interested in local events going on around Scotland relevant to community health. One such event was held on Sunday 10th July at the Klondyke Garden Centre in Stirling – the opening contribution of Forth Environment Link (FEL) to the Edible Broomridge programme. Exhibits included Square Foot Gardening and Home Composting as part of FEL's Forth Valley Zero Waste Volunteer Scheme. In addition, John Shearman from the Dunblane & Stirling Beekeepers' Association attracted much interest with his demonstration beehive. Sounds like a great success, and we are also told that the rain held off! Read more here.

Mind Waves

Mind Waves is a pilot programme developed by Outside the Box aimed at promoting mental health through positive use of the media. The aim is to raise awareness among the general public about mental wellbeing and recovery and what makes a healthy community for everyone. The programme will make use of a wide range of ways to promote messages about mental wellbeing, such as social networking, blogs and internet sites such as YouTube, newspaper articles, recording pieces for the radio and using the creative arts.

Outside the Box is looking for people who would like to get involved. Click here to find out more

Co-production and public procurement

The Scottish Government has produced a guide for public and third sector organisations working in partnership. It is based on lessons learned from the Public Social Partnership Project which set up 10 pilot projects around Scotland contributing to local and national outcomes, each involving co-production between a public body and third sector organisations. Entitled A Practical Guide to Forming and Operating Public Social Partnerships, the guide follows an 'Analyse, Plan, Do and Review' approach (familiar to those who have used the LEAP evaluation tool) and provides plenty of case studies as illustration. Click here to view the resource.

The Wah Kin Project: Equally connected Glasgow

The final report for the Wah Kin Project has been launched. A partnership between the Glasgow North Community Health & Care Partnership and Glasgow Association for Mental Health, the Wah Kin project aimed to increase accessibility of primary care mental health services to people aged 50 and over who are from the Chinese community. It did this by exploring concepts of mental health and well-being and effective interventions from the perspective of older people from the Chinese community.

'A Most Curious Detour' – dramatized reading sponsored by The Stroke Association

The above innovative event will take place during the Festival of Spirituality and Peace in St John's Parish Church, Princes Street, Edinburgh on Sunday August 28, 2011 between 2.00 – 3.30pm.

This dramatized reading is based on stroke survivor Stuart Hepburn's short life-affirming book, A Most Curious Detour, chronicling his life experiences before, during and after the onset of stroke. A spiritual message will follow with readings by Stuart and the Rev Ian Gilmour, minister of St Andrew's and St George's West Church in Edinburgh.

St John's will also host an art exhibition which will include Stuart's work and other members of the Firrhill Day Centre in Edinburgh.

Walkable Communities - local people taking action

Living Streets Scotland is running events with community groups to support communities across Scotland to take action to improve local walking environments in partnership, where appropriate, with local authorities. The events will focus on the conditions for walking of a particular street or area that is known to the group and in doing so will highlight the importance of walking for health, and will look at examples of built environments that are conducive to walking.

There is no cost to the group and Living Streets can meet sundry costs such as refreshments, venue hire and small-scale group actions as necessary. Wherever possible, meetings will be held in the usual meeting place of the group. If this is not possible, meetings will be held in a venue as close as possible to the area/street to be audited by the group.

The project is interested in working with all types of groups but particularly want to include people with disabilities, older people and women generally.
